Promoting student achievement and school improvement through professional development.

Culturally Responsive Educational Practices Summer Institute

with Roy Louis, Judy Louis & Trish Randolph-Beaver

Date: Friday, August 26, 2011

Venue: Lacombe Composite High School

Time: 9:00 am to 3:00 pm

Address: 5628 56 Ave., Lacombe

Cost: $20

Lunch: Lunch is included

This session is made possible through a grant from Alberta Education

About the session:

Roy will share First Nation perspective on these topics, understanding Plains Cree local history and protocol, key historical events that have affected first Nations and strategies that work for FNMI students in your classrooms. These perspectives will engage FNMI students and support their success. Roy and Judy will share resources, websites and discuss how to use artifacts in the classroom to enhance student learning.

Judy will share culturally responsive practices that build upon the values, preferences, beliefs and cultural context and identity of the FNMI student. She will share curriculum related resources based on learner outcomes, give examples of high yield learning strategies, non-linguistic representations and practical information for educators. These strategies and approaches support FNMI student engagement while all students benefit.

Trish works collaboratively to enhance teacher capacity with knowledge, skills and attributes necessary to improve FNMI student achievement, excellence and success. Her presentation will include the resource: "Our Words, Our Ways: Teaching First Nations, Metis and Inuit Learners". These strategies reflect cultural continuity and support FNMI success in the classroom. As well, Trish will share excellent websites and resources for students and teachers.

Participants will have an opportunity to ask Roy, Judy and Trish any questions they might have.
